

October 2015

JAKE'S JABS & JABBER

Doggone it! Everyone's been so busy around here. My master will need to check the "other" block on applications asking for race: he is now Pantry-Beige with all the globs, spots and streaks of paint on him. Camp Washington Chili knows him by name. They're the only place open 10pm/11pm when he finishes for the day painting. Good thing they're open late otherwise he might not eat at all since he really isn't the best with a stove or cooking utensils. (Although he's a great grill-meister!)

The first goal was to paint and ready the expanded Pantry in mid-September for Archbishop Schnurr's Blessing of the Letters being sent to our government leaders. Such a beautiful morning it was for a beautiful purpose—to find justice and charitable solutions to end hunger. (photos are all from the event)

A beautiful discovery as well, there was a Little Leo in our midst. Isn't he a cutie?!!! It is in faces like Little Leo's that remind us why we do what we do —our future, the children, the legacy of a good, nurtured life. And we don't confine it to the physical aspect, either. It's the whole kit-and-caboodle!

The second goal is now to move over to our Carll Street location sometime this month. Or, better yet, to be in full swing by November!

In the meantime, I'll just bouncy-bounce around here contemplating my crazy costume for Halloween. Hmmm...maybe as that Wookiee character in Star Wars, Chewbacca. I really wouldn't have to do much since I could be his twin just as I am!

Arfin' is Awesome; Yippin's so Yuckie!

- Jake

