From Fr. Jim . . .

Insights and wisdom from Dewitt Jones, professional photographer for National Geographic Magazine: This man is a great photographer and many of his pictures for the magazine are award winning. Through the years, he has learned good principles for taking great pictures that he also has discovered can be applied to real life situations for planning, change and better living. The following are some of his thoughts: If we cannot change lenses on how we look at things, we are trapped. Reframe the problem into an opportunity. There is always more than one right answer. Find the right angle. Turn a win/lose into a win/learn situation. Do not be afraid of making mistakes. If patterns go too long without questions, they become prisons. Life presents us with windows of opportunities. Put yourself in the place of the most potential. Train your technique to see the extraordinary. Vision springs from really caring, really caring.

Can we apply his principles to the real-life situations that we face today as we wait for herd immunity from the coronavirus, enter the planning process “Beacons of Light” for the future of parish vitality with a shortage of priest leadership, and as we struggle with racism, violence, abuse, inequality, injustice and the losses of finances, jobs, and life? Where is the extraordinary (God) present to us? What questions do we need to ask? Are there windows of opportunities? Can we find our potential? Do we care enough to clearly see God’s vision and will for us right now? “Vision springs from really caring.”

“Like Jesus’s fellow villagers, we risk not recognizing him. An abstract and distant god who doesn’t get himself involved in situations is more comfortable. God incarnated Himself: humble, tender, hidden, drawing near to us, living the normality of our daily life.” ~ Pope Francis
